PROGRAM REPORT

Name of the Program : One Week Faculty Development Programme on “SOCIOLOGY OF HEALTH WITH SPECIAL REFERENCES TO WORK LIFE BALANCE CHALLENGES”

Resource person Name : Dr. K. RAMANJENEYULU
PROFESSOR
DR. KV. SUBBAREDDY INSTITUTER OF MANAGEMENT
Kurnool.
Phone: +91 94947 33850

Duration of program : 18/06/2021 to 25/06/2021

No of participants : 70

Description : The pressing demands of work over the years have had a significant constraint on the family and social life of working adults. Moreover, failure to achieve a ‘balance’ between these domains of life may have an adverse effect on their health. This study investigated the relationship between work-life conflict and self-reported health among working adults in contemporary welfare countries

Course objectives:

1. Sustainable innovation contributes to business sustainability, since it has a potential positive effect on a company’s financial, social and environmental performance
2. An increasing interest at the academic, business and political level regarding the relationship between sustainable innovation and business performance.

3. In view of the importance of sustainable innovation for the competitiveness of companies and its potential relationship with business performance
4. This study can foster the adoption of a business behavior that integrates the goals of sustainable development in a strategic and systemic way.

Course outcomes:

1. performance measurement is still a critical and much debated issue, despite the recognition of its important role in the efficient and effective management of organizations
2. To evaluate business performance, it is necessary to define the parameters that the company will use..
3. The relationship between sustainability management and economic performance; by using separate measures for social and environmental performance.
4. Sustainable innovation incorporates technological improvements that can lead to energy saving, pollution minimization, waste recycling, green product development and corporate environmental management.
